Stretch the usefulness of writing with HIPs!

Writing exercise: What comes to your mind when you think of a writing assignment? Write down as many words, phrases, assignments, etc. that you can think of in one minute. Believe it or not, this one-minute writing exercise is just one example of a writing activity that can be high-impact for learning.

What makes writing high-impact?

- Interactions between students and instructors, peers, writing tutors, or friends/family.
- Meaning-making (Anderson et al., 2016)
- Metacognition
  Teachers Guide to Reflection
- Sustained engagement (AAC&U, 2023)

Keep reading for examples below!
How does UA’s Gen Ed program promote high-impact writing?

The Writing Attribute focuses on promoting greater facility with written communication and helps students to:

- Practice writing as a process rather than a product.
- Identify previous writing experiences and transfer writing practices to different types of writing.
- Define disciplinary or field-specific writing expectations.

These writing activities give students experience interacting with others about writing, engage them in meaning-making, and help them practice sustained engagement with writing. Providing opportunities for feedback and reflection is essential.

Examples of High Impact Writing Elements

- Meaning-making: asking students to write an evaluation of a policy, practice, or position (Anderson et al., 2016).
- Metacognition: encouraging students to activate their prior knowledge, reflect on their own cognition, and engage in activities for personal growth (UCATT, Teacher’s Guide to Reflection).
- Sustained engagement: having students work on writing over the course of a unit or semester, with opportunities for feedback-driven metacognition (Reynolds et al., 2020).
How can instructors stretch the usefulness of writing with HIPs?

Transferable assignment ideas:

Authentic writing tasks, including (but not limited to):
- Critiques
- Reflective personal narratives
- Annotated bibliographies
- Proposals
- Legal briefs
- Community reports

Writing-to-learn:

- Minute-papers
- Think, pair, share
- Exit tickets
- Word association
- Writing a catch phrase to summarize a concept
- Creating an Instagram post to advertise a product
- Summarizing a concept in 5 words or less
- And many more!